COMPANY OVERVIEW

"For the flawless flow of information worldwide"

Corporate Translations, Inc. is a company that specializes in the language translation of printed and published documents and language interpreting services – both in person and over the phone (OPI). Established in 1995, Corporate Translations is headquartered in Redondo Beach, CA, just 15 minutes south of the Los Angeles International Airport. With an in-house team of experienced project managers and linguists working with a network of over 400 international language professionals, we deliver fast, accurate translations with unsurpassed quality of diverse projects for the pharmaceutical, clinical trials, bioscience, medical, legal, human resources, market research, government and other industries.

Services

Corporate Translations offers a comprehensive set of language solutions and services to its Clients, including:

- A Four-Phase Translation Process
- Native speaking translators and editors
- ATA and ALC Corporate Members
- Multilingual Desktop Publishing
- Interpretation Services (On-site & Phone)

Language Solutions

The core of Corporate Translations' business is language solutions. Working with native speaking, professional translators around the world for excellent results combined with a mix of in-house linguists and partner companies, Corporate Translations is able to assign the most qualified team to each project.

All linguists are native speakers of their respective languages, full-time professional translators, and experts in the subject matter of their translations. They are experienced with project plans (meeting deadlines), translation memory tools, terminology management databases, and are accredited by the American Translator Association (ATA). Corporate Translations accepts fewer than 5% of applications for translation assignments, ensuring our translators are the best in the industry.

Budget Management

Written estimates ensure all project costs are agreed to prior to starting a project. Budget management ensures each invoice is then delivered for the amount estimated allowing forecasts to be met.

Accuracy and Quality

Corporate Translations is committed to flawless communication. Utilizing a quality driven, four-phase translation process (using four separate linguists) we translate text as well as intentions! This commitment enables our clients to communicate flawlessly with their specific audiences.

Corporate Translations' approach to quality is quite simple: prevent problems from happening rather than fix them after they occur. Our standard is zero defects. With every project, we aim to meet and exceed our client's requirements!

On-time Production

Corporate Translations can virtually eliminate missed deadlines using a unique status update process throughout the completion of a project. This also ensures that our clients will meet related downstream project deadlines.

Corporate Translations employs project managers who coordinate worldwide resources. A project manager is responsible for communicating with the client, managing internal and external resources and ensuring final deliverable quality.

TRANSLATION PROCESS OVERVIEW

Our QUALITY-MANAGEMENT PROCESS, developed from many years of experience, begins with the authorization of an itemized PROPOSAL for the total cost of your project. At this point, you will be assigned a DEDICATED PROJECT MANAGER who will work with you for the entirety of your relationship with Corporate Translations. The project manager will be fluent in your industry and its particular regulations and certification obligations. Of course, the project manager will become fluent in the translation demands of your projects and in your company's unique requirements. The project manager can be relied upon to guide you through the translation process and anticipate your needs along the way.

For the highest-quality translations, Corporate Translations uses a FOUR-PHASE TRANSLATION PROCESS: ANALYSIS PHASE, TRANSLATION PHASE, EDITING PHASE and PROOFREADING PHASE. The project manager manages this process, beginning with the ANALYSIS PHASE. The first part of the analysis phase is centered on preparing the proposal (scheduling, cost, delivery, program versions, fonts, etc.). Once the proposal has been authorized, and receipt confirmed with the client, the second part of the analysis phase takes place. This entails a comprehensive analysis of your document, during which your project manager will address potential red flags (U.S.-based 800 telephone numbers, acronyms, formatting variances, etc.). Experience has shown that the more thorough the analysis, the more accurate the translation, and the more time- and cost-effective the overall process. At Corporate Translations, process and quality are synonymous.

After working side-by-side with you during the analysis phase to resolve all linguistic and technical issues, your project manager will begin the TRANSLATION PHASE and the EDITING PHASE by selecting a translator and editor especially suited to your needs. Translator and Editor qualifications are of the utmost importance. Corporate Translations recruits highly experienced translation specialists with verified credentials (i.e. a practicing doctor in the country of origin, professional degree, etc.); documented accreditation (i.e. from the American Translators Association); and impeccable references from leaders in a variety of fields.

Once assigned, the translator and editor will become part of your dedicated translation team. This team will serve alongside your larger Corporate Translations team – led by your dedicated project manager – to complete your project. Your project manager will then ensure the availability of your dedicated translation team for future projects with the same requirements.

During the translation and editing phases, the translator, then the editor proceeds systematically through the text. State-of-the-art memory tools and other technologies may be employed during the translation phase to leverage sections of text that have been translated previously. This promotes consistency throughout the translation and prevents needless re-translation, thus reducing the time and cost expenditures associated with not only the project at hand, but ensuing projects as well.

Next, your project manager will oversee Corporate Translations' meticulous PROOFREADING PHASE, after which the proofreader and translation team will confer with you about issues that may have emerged. It is at this point in the process that the project manager consults with you to document any revisions of your original specifications so they can be incorporated into later projects. As you further refine your requirements, we continue to chronicle and archive them. Through strict adherence to our quality process, the quality of our translations improves with each successive project.

Once the proofreading phase has been completed and all fine-tuning of your requirements has been logged, the FINAL PROJECT is either delivered to you as scheduled or prepared for Formatting/DTP (desktop publishing).
